What's New In?

"Cancer" is a term used to describe a group of diseases characterized by uncontrolled growth and spread of abnormal cells in the body. There are many types of cancer and there is no one "cure" for cancer. But doctors can sometimes find a treatment to help a person live with cancer for a long time. Research is continuing for new treatments. What are the different types of cancer? Cancer is a very big topic with many types of disease. Cancers are named for the organ or area of the body where the disease starts.

The most common types of cancer are:

Ovarian cancer. Cancer of the ovaries (adenocarcinoma) is a very common cancer, but only about 15 percent of cases are diagnosed at an early stage.

Brain cancer. About 40,000 Americans will develop brain cancer this year. The most common type is malignant glioma, which occurs in the brain, where it affects about 33,000 people in the United States each year.

Breast cancer. The American Cancer Society estimates that more than 260,000 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year, and more than 180,000 women will die of the disease. The term "breast cancer" is used to describe both the disease and a larger group of cancers that can occur in the breast.

Prostate cancer. Approximately 181,000 people will be diagnosed with prostate cancer, and about 27,000 people will die from the disease.

Lung cancer. Cancers of the lung, of which there are many subcategories, are the most common cancer in men, accounting for almost 30 percent of cancer cases. Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths, with more than 160,000 Americans dying from the disease each year. Kidney cancer. Cancer of the kidney is usually too slow to be found early, resulting in fewer than 10 percent of people with kidney cancer being diagnosed before spreading to other organs. However, with more frequent use of imaging technology, more kidney cancers are being found at an early stage. Skin cancer. The skin is the largest organ of the human body. It protects the internal organs and is the first line of defense against external threats. It also helps us communicate, regulate our body temperature, and produce vitamin D. The most common types of skin cancer are squamous cell carcinoma and basal cell carcinoma. Other skin cancers include Kaposi's sarcoma, melanoma, and Merkel cell
